ARMY OF ODD FELLOWS IN IMPOSING PARADE

Central Penna. Lodges Anniversary Celebration.

WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

Thousands of Visitors From Eighteen Counties Aid in Celebrating the Ninety-seventh Anniversary of Odd Fellowship.

Thousands of Central Pennsylvania Odd Fellows invaded Bellefonte yesterday on the occasion of the celebration of the ninety-seventh anniversary of Odd Fellowship and the thirty-second annual session of the Pennsylvania Odd Fellows' Anniversary Association. Viewed from any angle you please, the demonstration was a splendid success. The Weather Man evidently has never been initiated into the mysteries denoted by the three links, for he handed out nothing but rain and gloom the greater part of Tuesday and gave the local committeemen the biggest kind of a scare lest Wednesday should be no brighter and hundreds of prospective visitors be forced to remain at home. However, the Weather Man gave a display of eleventh-hour repentance and as if to redeem himself furnished ideal weather for the big day.

There were few visitors in town until Wednesday morning's excursion trains arrived, and then the crowd came with a rush. With bands playing and banners flying Odd Fellow lodges arrived from all directions and soon the town was thronged to capacity. It would be a guess at best to say how many visitors were in town, but the crowd was up to all expectations and seemingly everybody had a good time. Many of the business houses and residences in the central part of town were decorated, while suspended across the principal streets at various points were flags and bunting.

Considering the great crowd to be handled in the central part of the town the order maintained spoke volumes in praise for Central Pennsylvania Odd Fellows. Twelve police officers were on duty, but they had little to do beyond aiding in keeping the crowds moving. Four police officers were secured from Williamsport for the day. It was found impossible to get State police for the occasion, all State troopers being on duty in sections where labor troubles are threatened.

Of course, in popular interest the big feature of the day was the monster street parade. This was held during the afternoon and proved to be a most imposing spectacle. Thousands of Odd Fellows were in line, the marching delegations representing eighteen counties. The route was through the principal streets of the town, and at many points the parading delegations were warmly applauded in recognition of the precision of step and perfect line maintained. In fact, not a few of the delegations marched with the skill of crack military companies.

After forming on Logan Street and proceeding to Ridge and then down Bishop to Allegheny the great parade passed between crowded streets out Allegheny to Linn Street. Troop L, First Pennsylvania Cavalry, headed the line as an escort of honor. Past Grand Samuel D. Gettig was chief marshal and Past Grand Thomas S. Hazel was chief of staff. They had as aides J. H. Eberhart, Edward R. Owens, Nevin E. Cole and Arthur C. Dale. Immediately following there was carried an emblem that was cheered lustily upon all sides. It was a handsome American flag, and the greeting accorded the Stars and Stripes was an inspiring testimonial of the patriotism of the thousands of home folks and visitors. Next in line were Grand Lodge and Association officers who were conveyed in automobiles. Following was the Orphanage band from the Central Pennsylvania Odd Fellows Home. The music furnished by the boys was of the highest order and won numerous bursts of applause. The band preceded Department Commander Major General J. B. Andrews and staff in automobiles, and following marched Cantons, Patriarch's Militant, under command of Colonel N. E. Stover, accompanied by his staff.

The parade was made up of three grand divisions. Leading the first division as marshal was Charles A. Campbell, Lodge No. 602, of Philipsburg, who had as aides A. M. Hoagland, Lodge No. 729, J. T. O'Brien, Lodge No. 1007, and Charles F. Greevy, Lodge No. 112, all of Williamsport. Lodges making up this division were those from Lycoming, Blair, Potter, Bradford, Cameron, Huntingdon and Mifflin counties.

F. W. Magrady, Lodge No. 630, of Mt. Carmel, was marshal of the second division. His aides were C. S. Neff, Lodge No. 101, of Jersey Shore; M. W. Stout, Lodge No. 246, of Berwick, and A. H. Hartswick, Lodge No. 1032, of State College. Represented in this division were lodges from Northumberland, Centre, Montour, Union, Tioga, Snyder, Schuylkill, Dauphin, Lackawanna and Luzerne counties.

At the head of the third division as marshal was H. C. Jones, Lodge No. 140, of Bloomsburg, who had as aides D. F. Funk, Lodge No. 187, of Tyrone; F. D. Murray, Lodge No. 645, of Turbotville, and W. H. Austin, Lodge No. 427, of Blanchard. In this division were lodges from Columbia, Clearfield, Sullivan and Clinton counties and Centre Lodge, of Bellefonte.

Completing the line were Burgess Blanchard and members of borough Council, aged and infirm Odd Fellows, escorted in automobiles, Grand Lodge officers of the Rebekah Degree and also Rebekahs, all conveyed in automobiles.

At 3.30 P. M. an open air meeting was held in the diamond, J. H. Eberhart presiding. Burgess Blanchard delivered a formal address of welcome, which was responded to by Fred C. Hadyen, Past Grand Master and Treasurer of the Grand Lodge. The orator of the day was Rev. B. H. Hart, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge.

Last Light a special session of the Grand Lodge was held to confer Grand Lodge degrees. Initiatory degrees were conferred also by Allegheny Gateway Lodge No. 187, of Tyrone.

Next year's celebration will be held at Athens, Pa.

In the prize drill Tyrone Canton had no competition and was awarded the $15 prize.

Great Advance in Paper

All grades of paper have advanced so in price that printers and publishers are working at present under the greatest difficulties they have ever experienced. Most grades of paper have advanced fifty percent. and others more than one hundred percent. Manufacturers predict still further advances. For instance, we are paying $17 per ton more for the paper used in this week's issue of The Republican than was paid four months ago. The ink used in this issue costs us forty percent. more than we paid two months ago. So long as we are able to weather the storm of inflated prices, for much of which we believe there is little or no justification, we shall continue our subscription rate at $1.50. We would however, ask our subscribers to co-operate with us in our efforts to do this by promptly forwarding subscription payments. Each subscriber can help, at least with a partial payment, if it does not suit to send the full amount. Kindly give this your serious consideration and prompt attention.

Marriage Licenses.

Register Frank Sasserman has issued the following marriage licenses:

John E. McNichol, Julia McClellan Shillings,	Bellefonte "
James Beightol, Ella Hanscom	Winburne "
Albert E. Day, Elvera E. Glinz,	Pittsburgh Bellefonte
Wilbur Bachman, Mary E. Snook,	Bellefonte "
Leroy O. Moore, Alta Zimmerman,	Butler Pleasant Gap
James C. Miller, Mary K. Harter,	Bellefonte "
Oliver Bell, Margaret M. Woods,	Philipsburg "
A. Tedford Barclay, Emelyn Morris Cooper,	Galveston, Tex. "

Clearfield Licenses Granted.

Judge Bell at Clearfield on Monday granted three brewery and twelve wholesale liquor licenses that had been held up for sometime. The legality of the applications was questioned. It was claimed that they had been advertised only twice instead of three times. In his order Judge Bell said he had given this point consideration and that he appreciated that the higher court might reverse his order should the matter be appealed by the anti-saloon forces. He warned the applicants that if they accepted the licenses it would be at their own risk.

Rev. John Zeigler Dead.

Rev. John Zeigler died on Thursday night of last week at his late home at Snow Shoe Intersection. He had been ill about five weeks. Funeral services were held on Monday, interment being made at the Advent cemetery. The deceased was aged 76 years. He was born in Northumberland County. He was a resident of Centre County for about forty-five years. Surviving are a widow and a brother and sister, George and Mary Zeigler, both residing in Northumberland County.

STATE CAVALRY MAY BE SENT TO SRRIKE ZONE

Sheridan Troop, of Tyrone, Advised to be in Readiness.

LABOR TROUBLES ACUTE

Thousands of Men on Strike in Western End of State—Situation Beyond Control of Constabulary—Pittsburgh Storm Center.

Fifty thousand men employed in the mills in and about Pittsburgh are on strike and the situation has reached a critical stage. A number of disturbances have occurred and it is feared matters have got beyond the control of the State Constabulary.

It was reported last night that the State Cavalry would likely be sent to the strike zone. Adjutant General Stuart, at Harrisburg, yesterday advised Captain Moore, at Tyrone, that the Sheridan Troop would be the first to be called. He directed that the Troop be placed in readiness to move at any hour.

Thus far Captain Curtin, of Troop L, stationed in Bellefonte, has received no formal advices from Harrisburg regarding the situation. If the Central Penna. troopers are called out, however, Troop L will be included.

PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING

Miss Emelyn Morris Cooper Becomes Bride of Mr. A. Tedford Barclay.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John's Protestant Episcopal church on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, the bride being Miss Emelyn Morris Cooper and the groom Mr. A. Tedford Barclay, both of Galveston, Texas. Rev. Mr. Charlton officiated. The bride wore a white taffeta and georgette crepe dress, with a long court train and tulle veil and carried a boquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her maid of honor, Miss Josephine Freund, of New York, wore a white net dress and large picture hat with a pink rose on it. She carried an arm full of callow lilies. The groom was attended by Mr. John Campbell, of Lexington, Virginia. The ushers were Mr. Hassel Montgomery and Mr. Orvis Keller, of Bellefonte; Mr. Paul Kerk, of Philadelphia, and Mr. George Brew, of New York.

A special musical service for the occasion was rendered by Miss Bradley. The organ program preceding the service was the following: Offertoire in D minor—Batiste; Caprice—Wrightson; Scherzando Gillette; Benediction Nuptiale—Frysinger; Benediction Nuptiale—Hollins. The wedding party entered the church to the march from "Tannhauser", by Wagner. During the ceremony the hymn "O Perfect Love", by Barnby, was a soft musical accompaniment. The recessional march was by Mendelssohn.

Mr. and Mrs. Barclay motored to Milesburg, where they boarded a train for their honeymoon tour. They will reside in Texas.

Snow Shoe Township Sued.

Suits to recover money alleged to be due the state on state highway accounts were begun in the Dauphin County court last week by the State Highway Department, as follows:

Great Bend township, Susquehanna county, $11,203; Snow Shoe township, Centre county, $4,059, and Washington county, $686.

The suits are based on state aid highway jobs, in which the state pays 50 per cent of the cost and the county and township in which the road is built 25 per cent each.

The State alleges that each of the defendants in the suits has failed to pay its share. The shares of Susquehanna and Centre counties and the share of the township in Washington county, however, have been paid.

Mrs. Lemuel Watson Dead.

Mrs. Lemuel Watson, a highly esteemed resident of Snow Shoe, died at her late home at that place on Wednesday of last week, her death being caused by pneumonia. She had been ill several weeks. The maiden name of the deceased was Peters and she resided before her marriage at Milesburg. Surviving are her husband and four small children. Funeral services were held at Snow Shoe on Saturday.

To Electrocute Two.

Governor Brumbaugh at Harrisburg on Tuesday fixed the week of May 22d, for the electrocution at Rockview of Charles Douglas and Andrew Breeze, convicted of murder in Westmoreland County.

DAVID F. FORTNEY DIES SUDDENLY IN OFFICE

Prominent Citizen and Lawyer Expired in Chair.

HAD NOT BEEN WELL

Returned to His Office After Being Confined to House by Illness—Collapsed While Examining Some Papers and Soon Was Dead.

David F. Fortney, one of Bellefonte's most prominent citizens, the oldest member of the Centre County bar and veteran of the Civil war, died suddenly in his law office opposite the Court House early Monday afternoon. The news of his death was a shock to the entire community. He had not been enjoying the most rugged health for some time past, and last week was confined to his home on Bishop Street, although not being so ill as to necessitate his remaining in bed. On Saturday he had recovered sufficiently to walk up street and visit his office. On Monday afternoon he was at his office, spending some time at his desk located in the rear. Sheriff Yarnell and Arthur C. Dale dropped into the office and Mr. Fortney walked into the front room to examine a paper lying on the desk of his son, D. Paul Fortney. While reading it he suffered an attack of heart failure. He sank into a chair and few minutes later was dead. He was 72 years old.

The Centre County bar association met on Tuesday morning and took appropriate action on Mr. Fortney's death. Funeral services were held today at 10 o'clock from the late home, Rev. W. H. McKinney, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

The following interesting record of the life of Mr. Fortney is taken from Biographical Sketches of Centre Countians:—

David F. Fortney, practically speaking, was reared among agricultural pursuits. His early education was such as the neighboring schools of the township afforded. He was in attendance at the academy at Pine Grove Mills, during which time he walked over three miles each way every day in the week, and was never tardy. While at the academy, in August, 1862, young Fortney, with others, the principal included, enlisted for the war in Company D, 148th P. V. I., under the command of Colonel James A. Beaver, afterward Governor of Pennsylvania and later Judge of the Superior Court. In less than a year, however, the young man Fortney was discharged from the service for disability arising from fever contracted while therein. He then returned to Pine Grove Academy for some months, and later taught a five-months term of school at White Hall school house, in Ferguson Township, receiving $20 per month for his services. From April 20, 1864, to the last of September, 1866, he attended what was known as Vermillion Institute, at Hayesville, Ohio, which was in charge of Rev. S. Dieffendorf, and was an excellent school, where he received quite a liberal education in higher mathematics, sciences, and in the Latin and Greek languages. On returning from Hayesville, he taught one term of school in Decatur Township, Clearfield County. Early in life he made up his mind to be a lawyer, and with this end in view he attended school and taught probably longer than he otherwise would have done. In the spring of 1867 he entered the law office of Hon. John H. Orvis, of Bellefonte, and while reading law did for his board whatever work was to be done on his preceptor's place of some three acres, which comprised an orchard and garden. He was admitted to the bar April 30th, 1869, having practically worked his way through school and maintained himself by working part of the time while studying law.

From the very first he took high rank as a lawyer, and gained and held the respect of his colleagues, and had acquired a fine practice, when he to some extent lost his hearing. While this in no way injured his ability as a lawyer, nor interfered with him as a counselor, it did to a certain extent prevent him from engaging in trials in court. As an advocate his ability was recognized by the bar and the public, and he was frequently employed in cases simply to make the argument to the jury because of his recognized ability along this line. But for this misfortune there probably was no public position his friends would not have been willing to give him, and which he would not have honorably filled.

He was chairman of the Democratic County Committee in 1871, and again in 1879, and in 1877 was elected District Attorney of Centre County for a term of three years by the largest majority which up to that time in a straight contest between two candidates had been given for many years. He was frequently importuned to be a candidate for the Legislature, and just as often refused. For many years he took an active part in State and County campaigns, always being in demand as a campaign orator.

From January, 1882, to January, 1888, Mr. Fortney was solicitor for Centre County, and from January, 1891, to virtually the time of his death he was engaged at times in auditing State and County accounts. During his first term (January, 1882, to January, 1888) through his efforts there was collected and paid over to the treasury of the county over $32,000. The fund arose from a lot of old claims which the County held against various townships in and outside of the County. He pushed the claims and at the end of about three years' litigation the County was successful in virtually every case.

Mr. Fortney was a writer of recognized ability and editorials from his pen have appeared frequently in local newspapers. In April, 1894, he was appointed postmaster of Bellefonte. From June, 1882, to just a few years ago he was a member of the Bellefonte School Board and for many years was president of the board.

On September 19, 1876, he was married to Sarah E. Huey, who was a native of Harris Township and died a few years ago. To their union were born twin children, David Paul, the fourth in line to be called David, who resides in Bellefonte, and Katy H., who died August 15th, 1886, in her tenth year.

WRECKED SCHOOL ROOM

Two Casanova Youths Smashed in Door With Empty Beer Keg.

Lewis Dundliski, 19 years old, and August Zinki, 20 years old, were arrested last Saturday charged with smashing in the door of the public school house at Casanova with an empty beer keg and wrecking the interior of the building. The boys were drunk and on a rampage. Just what freak of fancy prompted them to invade the school house they seemed unable to say. They are coal miners and previously bore good reputations in their home community. Dundliski is a Slav while Zinki is of German descent.

At the instance of the Rush Township school board a warrant for the boys was issued. They were taken into custody and brought to jail at Bellefonte. They entered a plea of guilty and expressed not only regret for what they had done but also a determination to guard against getting into trouble in the future.

Caught Monster Trout.

Trout fishermen and a few spectators including the writer enjoyed a rare treat on Monday afternoon along Spring Creek, opposite the Central Railroad of Penna. passenger station. It proved to be an ideal afternoon for minnow fishing. Matthew Wagner was casting from the top of the stone wall along the lumber yard side of the creek when he had a strike that fairly bent his rod double. For the last week many fishermen have been after a monster trout in that part of the stream, and as it turned out Wagner was the lucky fellow to hook the prize. It required considerable effort and skill to land the trout that measured exactly twenty-five inches. While this was the largest trout to be landed during the day the prize battle came when a few minutes later Hugh Crider had a sharp strike and the next instant a large rainbow trout jumped several feet out of the water. For fully ten minutes there was a fight that made one's blood tingle. Time and again the trout leaped from the water in its efforts to dislodge the hook. It finally was scooped up with a landing net. This trout measured about sixteen inches. Probably half an hour later Mr. Crider had another strike, this time landing a brown trout that measured about fourteen inches. On the same afternoon Clayt Brown caught a sixteen inch trout in the same stream.

Celebrated Her 100th Anniversary.

Mrs. Catherine Goss, of Osceola, on Tuesday of last week celebrated her one hundredth birthday anniversary. Forty relatives sat down at the table to enjoy the birthday feast, at which she was the honored hostess. At 12 o'clock noon, whistles of the town were blown and all the church bells rang out their joyous sound. During the afternoon she received about 100 callers, shaking hands with all. Six of her sons and daughters were present, the youngest one being over half a century old. The gifts presented to Mrs. Goss were numerous and beautiful. In the evening she was tendered a serenade by the Osceola band.

Mrs. Goss was born at Buffalo Run, but removed with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gearhart, to Philipsburg in her early girlhood days.

BALLOT AT PRIMARIES WILL BE COMPLICATED

Each Voter Will Have to Make About Forty Marks.

MEANS LATE RETURNS

Large Group of Candidates in Field and Separate Mark for Each One to be Voted for is Required—Not Many Local Contests.

Its going to be some job to mark the ballot that will be used at the primary election on May 16th. It will be the largest primary sheet handed to the voters of Pennsylvania since the law became effective. To completely mark a party ticket in any election district in the State it will require about 40 separate marks for the Democratic and Republican electors who aspire to fully exercise the franchise.

In most any election district of the State the voter will be first called upon to indicate his choice of a Presidential nominee by making a cross after his name of his choice for the nomination of his party, if he has a choice. Next he will scan the long list of candidates for delegates-at-large to the National convention. There are about 40 on the Republican ballot and 12 to be chosen and he must mark a cross after each of their names. Then come the candidates for alternates-at-large, with an equally long list of candidates and 12 to elect. Next the citizen is expected to single out the two candidates for National delegate in the Congressional district and two alternates.

Now arrives the task of indicating the individual's choice for United States Senator from Pennsylvania. Philander C. Knox is without opposition for the Republican nomination. In the Democratic party there is a fight against the Palmer-McCormick leadership, with Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, opposing former Judge Ellis Orvis, of Bellefonte, for the Senatorship. Congressman Michael Liebel is opposing A. Mitchell Palmer for National Committeeman.

Now the eye of the voter rests upon the candidates for State offices. He must make a cross after the name of his choice for State Treasurer, and then one after his favorite candidate for Auditor General, and going over into the non-partisan column of the ballot, a mark to show who he favors for Judge of the Supreme Court.

For Congress in this district Congressman Charles H. Rowland, of Philipsburg, has no opposition for renomination on the Republican ticket. William Tobias, of Clearfield, is without opposition for the Democratic nomination. For Assembly nomination Representative H. B. Scott, of Philipsburg, and Professor C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, are rival aspirants. M. I. Gardner, of Bellefonte, is without opposition for the Democratic nomination.

There is a contest on for Centre County's member in the Republican State Committee. The opposing candidates are Linn Harris, of Bellefonte, and H. H. Ashman, of Philipsburg.

Held for Court.

George Mothersbaugh, of Bald Eagle, was on Monday held under $300 bail for court, following a hearing on a charge brought by Enoch VanAiken and John Irvin, also of Bald Eagle. It was alleged that he had discharged a shot gun to frighten VanAiken, Irvin and Daniel Woodring who were cutting timber on a piece of land for George Woodring. Mothersbaugh was arrested last Friday and brought to jail in Bellefonte. After bail was furnished on Monday he was released.

According to David Howard, of Bald Eagle, he sold the timber on a piece of land to George Woodring and the latter employed VanAiken and Irvin to do the cutting and Daniel Woodring to do the hauling. Mr. Howard informed us that while the men were engaged in cutting the timber Mothersbaugh appeared with a shot gun and fired a shot. A warrant for the latter was secured and he was placed under arrest.

Mrs. James M. Fye Dead.

Funeral services were held on Friday of last week for Mrs. James Mann Fye, of Howard, who passed away on April 18th. She is survived by her husband, two brothers and five sisters as follows: William and Robert Mann, of Marsh Creek; Mrs. Kathryn Packer, of Kane; Mrs. Mary Jane Watson, of Niagara Falls; Mrs. Rebecca Lyon, of Howard; Mrs. Carrie Shappell, of Lock Haven, and Sadie Nyman, of Marsh Creek.

Another ÆTNA Check Came This Morning

ISN'T it fine, John! Your eighth week in bed just gone by and we've received two of these checks for $200 each. We can buy that new dining room set now as though nothing had happened.

Every husband ought to take out an ÆTNA DISABILITY POLICY, John. We women are so dependent on what you men do for us—especially when we have children.

Just think—$50 a week as long as you're sick, up to a full year. And at such a trifling cost, too. Oh, John, why will men put off these things until it's too late! We women were never meant to fight hardships that a few cents a day could save us from.

ORIGIN OF ORE DEPOSITS.

Deep Down Hot Springs Form Veins of Precious Metals.

Steamboat Springs, Nevada, has figured prominently in discussions of the origin of ore deposits. The waters of these springs contain the precious metals in minute quantities, and the sinter deposited by them contains several minerals that are common constituents of ores, as well as small quantities of many of the rarer metallic constituents of ore deposits, including gold and silver.

Such springs, therefore, suggest that many and perhaps most ore bearing veins have been formed by hot waters rising from great depths, which have brought their metal contents up in solution and deposited them in open spaces or fissures in the rocks through which the waters passed, the deposition of some ores being influenced by chemical reaction with the surrounding rock. Many ore deposits are undoubtedly formed in other ways, for some are unquestionably of sedimentary origin, and the metal content of some others has been carried down, redeposited and concentrated by rain water that descended into the earth's crust, but the "hydrothermal" origin—that is, their deposition from ascending hot water—of many of the more valuable ore deposits is indicated by the close relation observed at many places between mineral veins and eruptive rocks. Thermal waters are believed to be, in part at least, given off by slowly cooling and solidifying masses of igneous rock (magma) deep within the earth.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

THE MODERN TORPEDO.

How It Travels and Its Effect Upon Striking a Vessel.

The present day torpedo is a very different sort of weapon from that used half a century ago. It is shaped something like a cigar and is about twenty-three feet long and twenty-one inches in diameter. It weighs considerably more than a ton, and its construction costs from $5,000 to double that sum.

It is made to travel in a certain direction in a fixed time and to explode when it strikes some solid object, such as a ship's bottom. A torpedo of the largest and most modern type will tear a gaping hole in the stanchest ship ever built. The nose or "explosive head" of a torpedo contains the deadly charge of high explosives, nitroglycerin and guncotton being oftenest used.

When the torpedo strikes its target a tremendous detonation follows instantly, driving in both the outer and inner "skins" of a vessel. The hole it makes in a ship's bottom varies in size, but is seldom less than ten by thirty feet. The torpedo travels toward its victim at the rate, roughly, of about a thousand yards a minute. The distance and rate of speed have to be calculated to a nicety before the torpedo is discharged. It is kept to its destined course by perpendicular rudders in its tail.

The modern "dirigible" torpedo was first used in a naval war during the Chilean revolution of a quarter of a century ago.—New York World.

Forcing Flower Seeds.

It is a help to soak all hard seeds, such as sweet peas, nasturtiums, balsams, moonflower, etc., at least twelve hours and to file especially large seeds, such as canna and moonflower. This is done by rubbing the sharpest end (or any part away from the germ) over a file, just enough to have the white show. Filing must be done before soaking. Sweet peas may be soaked three or four days.

Another way to hurry coarse, slow to germinate seeds is to force between canton flannel. Take double pieces of canton flannel, wet thoroughly, place seeds between them and put in a warm place. Keep cloths moist all the time, and seeds will sprout in from one to three days. Transfer carefully to the ground with the root sprout down. —Farm and Home.

MUST PAY $2000 COSTS

Supreme Court Directs Clearfield County to Pay Expensive Suit.

The celebrated Dr. Dickinson hornless deer case from Clearfield County was disposed of last week when the Supreme Court handed down an opinion and decree placing the costs amounting to about $2000 on Clearfield County.

The case originated in 1911 when Dr. Dickinson, of Pittsburgh, a guest at Crystal Springs Camp, shot what was alleged to have been a male deer without horns. He was arrested and prosecuted by the State Game Commission before Squire John C. Barclay, of Clearfield.

Dr. Dickinson was adjudged guilty by the Justice and fined $100 and costs.

The case was appealed to the Clearfield County Quarter Sessions Court and Judge Searle, specially presiding for Judge Smith, threw the case out of Court.

An appeal to the Superior Court was taken by A. M. Liveright, representing the State Game Commission, and the action of the lower court was reversed and the case ordered back for trial. It was tried before Judge Bell and a verdict of not guilty rendered, and the costs placed upon the prosecutor, Dr. Kalbfus, Secretary of the State Game Commission.

Dr. Kalbfus appealed on the ground that he was a State officer and the prosecution was brought in his official capacity, hence he could not be made to settle for the costs. This phase of the case was argued before Judge Bell who held that Dr. Kalbfus was right, and would not have to settle, but made no decree or order for the payment of the costs.

Dr. Kalbfus then appealed from this decision relative to the non-payment of costs and the Supreme Court's edict will cause the taxpayers of Clearfield County to pay an exhorbitant bill of costs.

Drunkenness.

Man's getting drunk is to be likened unto the opening of the draft doors under the fire-box of a locomotive and generating a high steam pressure, opening the throttle and letting everything go until the machine is on a mad race through town and country, crushing whatever comes in the way, let it be man or beast, or maybe it will smash itself to a helpless mass.

If the tracks are clear the machine may run until its fire box, the stomach, burns out or a steam pipe—a blood vessel—bursts, or a valve gives way and the locomotive or the human body becomes a useless wreck and a burden in the way, says State Health Commissioner Dixon.

In the case of the locomotive the suffering is confined to the living beings it runs down, but in man not only the beings he injures or destroys but he himself suffers after he has irrepatably injured his physical body and mental powers. He may lose an arm, cripple his stomach, blood vessels or mind, and become a charge on his family or the community.

In the case of the locomotive it is only a piece of uncontrolled inanimate machinery, but in man it often means setting to run amuck a piece of the most inventive animal life ever recorded in history. When drunk he may spend his last cent on foolish things and leave a hungry family at his home. He may kill his best friend, violate a trust, throw a bomb, send a great passenger ship to the bottom of the sea, or even incite a war of Nations.

A drunken man is the most dangerous demoralizing factor in civilized life. The wild beast of the forest is a plaything in comparison. He sets all laws at naught and becomes an instrument of the devil. Man crazed by any kind of mental overexertion or drunkenness, like a rabid beast, is a menace to every one with whom he comes in contact.

The wild dash of the mind and body during the stage of over-stimulation may be fascinating to the individual but, when the inevitable reaction comes, death may ensue or sometimes that which is worse, returning consciousness bring a realization of a horrible crime committed never to be undone. At least body and mind are weakened and less able to control the insane desire to exhilarate again and again until untimely death ends a life that might have been a boon to humanity in some useful path over which its race might have been run.

Some temperaments become sloth-like and are oblivious to the past and reckless as to what is to come. In such the harm to them and others comes through neglected duties.

Drunkenness is over-stimulation that destroys normal conditions, it may even be occasioned by the psychology of a crowd.

There are various stimulants that will make men drunk.

$25,000 Fire at Morrisdale.

In a gale that made firefighting useless Kings hotel, the homes of George Hill and Miles Flegal and seven other dwellings at Morrisdale, were totally destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon.

All of the buildings were occupied, three of them being double houses owned by the Morrisdale Coal company.

The fire started in the Hill home and consumed everything in its path. Both Philipsburg fire companies were rushed to the blaze, but could accomplish nothing in the high wind. The loss is estimated at about $25,000.

Snow Shoe Y. W. C. A.

The opening meeting of the Snow Shoe Young Women's Christian Association was held on last Thursday evening. At this time it was voted to organize as a branch of the Centre County Y. W. C. A. and the county constitution was read by Miss Foresman, who explained the purpose of the Association. Various classes and clubs were talked of and more definite arrangements for them will be made at a meeting next week. A committee was appointed to nominate the officers and another committee to draw up the by-laws of the Snow Shoe branch. Reports of these committees will be given next week. After a free discussion it was unanimously voted to call the room which has been rented by the Association and is being beautified by the members "Community Hall" for the Y. W. C. A. is a community movement. The room may, of course, be secured for any good purpose for the use of various organizations of the community. Refreshments were served at the close of the business session.

NEW Post Toasties

No other flaked corn food on the market shares this honor--no other equals it in form or flavour.

Several distinctive features characterize this new and economical food delicacy.

Old style "corn flakes" do not possess much real flavour of their own. Old fashioned methods of making didn't bring it out. They depended largely for their taste on the sugar and cream or milk, you ate with them. You were never asked to test the flavour by eating them dry.

We want you to test the New Post Toasties by eating some dry, fresh from the package. You'll get the flavour at once. The new way of cooking, rolling, and toasting under quick, intense heat brings out the sealed-up goodness of the grain.

New Post Toasties do not mush down when milk or cleam is added. They don't crumble or "chaff" in the package or in the dish. There's substance to them, and so wonderfully delicious as to make you call for more.

ANGELA'S HERO

He Turned Out to Be What She Wanted

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Sunderland was one of those places that are very nice for young persons to live in until the time comes for the boys to choose careers and the girls to get married or—in these days of woman's independence—to choose careers too. There was one period when half a dozen or more youngsters formed a set that was voted the most attractive the town had ever contained.

Two decades passed after the set had been all together at Sunderland when Angela Thornton visited her old friend Edna Wolcott, now Edna Blake. After the greetings the two friends sat together over their work talking of old times. Some of those who had been happy together had gone to their long home. Others had been lost to their old associates. Presently Mrs. Blake said:

"Angela, I wonder if you realize that you are the only one of our old set who has never married." She smiled affectionately at Angela Thornton.

"Yes," said Angela calmly, "I do realize it, Edna. I suppose the rest of you, wives and mothers all, wonder why I am so contented."

"Tell me the secret, dear, and I'll not breathe it to another soul," coaxed Mrs. Blake.

Angela's charming face flushed, and she looked only half of her forty years. Her hair was so fair and golden, untouched by time, and her skin so fresh and unlined and her sweetness so unmarred by long years of sorrow and loss of loved ones that her friends declared she had discovered the secret of perennial youth.

"There was Alexander Finlay," began Edna Blake mischievously, "the first of a long line of suitors. Why, Angela, why did you refuse them all?"

"Because," said Angela quite simply "I was waiting for a hero, a real hero to arrive. Edna, I am a hero worshiper. All my life I have longed for some romantic adventure, thirsted for a lover who would bravely ride up to our gate and carry me off on a brave black horse. I know you are shocked," she ended with a whimsical smile.

Mrs. Blake's dark face was aglow with amusement and some inward excitement.

"So you have been waiting for a hero, you romantic goose!" she said at last. "In this twentieth century there are no bold lovers who carry their sweethearts off on brave black horses. They usually elope by motorcar. And Alexander Finlay is still unmarried and they say he has six motorcars."

"Not if he had sixteen motorcars!" declared Angela; then, with an effort to turn the conversation to a less personal topic, she went on, "How is Nathan getting on with his invention?"

"Wonderfully, if one may judge by his complete absorption in his work," returned Nathan's sister ruefully. "Actually, Angela, he hasn't poked his nose outside of that workshop for three weeks except to take a short walk around the fields. He sleeps there and I have his meals sent out to him. He says he doesn't dare leave the shop a moment. I asked him why he built it in the center of the ten acre field, and he said"—Mrs. Blake giggled—"it was going to be a fine season for turkeys."

"The idea!" gasped Angela. "You don't suppose he is raising turkeys and is going to corner the turkey market?"

"It's something with wings anyway," admitted Mrs. Blake. "I heard him talking to Mr. Fellowes about it."

"What does Mr. Blake think about it?"

"Oh, Jim? He declares Nathan is building an aeroplane; said he saw one hovering over the field one night last week. But I tell him it's all nonsense. Nathan isn't the sort of man to invent an aeroplane or anything half so romantic. You know, Angela, what a plodding, practical sort of boy my brother was. Well, he has grown up to be the most matter of fact man in some respects. He might invent a new sort of washing machine or some household necessity, but an aeroplane—never!"

That evening Mrs. Blake repeated the conversation to her highly edified husband, and that gentleman, strolling out to the ten acre field to enjoy an after dinner smoke with his brother-in-law, retold the story to Nathan.

Nathan listened, his dark head bent attentively. When he lifted it at last his expression was noncommittal. The afternoon sun shining on the lenses of his spectacles concealed his gray eyes from Jim's quizzical glance.

Jim Blake was rather disappointed at Nathan's silence. He had always suspected Nathan of having a tenderness for Angela Thornton, and, now that Angela had arrived from her New England home to make an extended visit with the Blakes, Jim had craftily planned to do a little matchmaking on his own account. And here was Angela, most unreasonable of women, demanding a romantic escapade, with a real hero in the bargain. Why, the woman might die an old maid after all, he argued as he went back to the house, for Nathan was anything but a heroic figure, with his tall, stooping form, his nearsighted gray eyes and his straight black hair and silent tongue.

"Hero, indeed!" he was muttering in his sleep, and Mrs. Blake, hearing him, smiled secretly.

"I wonder why he was telling Angela that the rose garden is haunted," she thought. "He knows she is quite fearless at night and might take to wandering around the garden to run our ghost to earth! Strange, Jim never spoke to me about the ghost; but, of course, I am not looking for adventures."

Angela was thinking about the ghost of the rose garden, and she decided that the very next moonlight night she would watch for it. "Not from the window," she told herself courageously, "but in the garden itself. Very likely it is only Edna's cook getting a breath of fresh air after a hard day's work, or it might be her sweetheart."

It rained the next night and the next, and it was not until the third night that a pale moon showed through the clouds. Nathan appeared at dinner that evening, and Angela showed such a charming embarrassment at meeting him and Nathan blinked so rapidly behind his glasses that Jim Blake came to the conclusion that Angela's plea of waiting for a "hero" to come into her life was only an excuse.

Nathan only remained a few minutes after the meal was concluded. Jim followed him into the porch for a quiet word.

"If you should be skimming around after dark, old man," he warned his brother-in-law, "just keep your eye on Miss Angela. She will be searching the rose garden for a ghost. It's sort of a fad of hers, you know, that and expecting bold lovers to ride up on black horses and elope with her. Just see that no one does it, eh?"

"Um—ah!" said Nathan rather vaguely as he wandered off toward the fields.

"Done, by Jove!" chuckled Jim Blake as he lighted a cigar.

It was verging on midnight when Angela Thornton slipped cautiously down the front stairs and let herself into the garden.

The Blakes prided themselves on their lovely gardens, especially the rose garden, which was inclosed in a high hedge of Cherokee roses.

The rose garden lay on the other side of an expanse of rolling lawns.

Angela, wearing her white frock, with a pale blue shawl wrapped around her slender shoulders, went slowly down the path and stepped on to the springy turf. The moon, drifting in and out of the scudding clouds, made alternate light and shadow on the grass.

It was a pleasant night for ghost hunting.

Presently there came a throbbing sound overhead and a deeper shadow on the lawn, though now the clouds had parted to let the moon shine through quite clearly.

Angela, startled, looked up and saw a great object bearing down upon her out of the night sky, a great black winged thing. No; it was white where the moonlight touched it!

Then it came down, down, reached the ground, rocked over the turf and came to a pause within half a dozen feet of Angela Thornton.

"Why, it's an aeroplane!" she thought and clasped her hands in delighted wonder, for she had never seen one except in the illustrated papers. "The poor man has lost his way!"

The aviator had climbed out of his seat and was coming toward Angela. His was a tall, thin, stooping figure dressed in leather garments and wearing close fitting cap and goggles. Over his arm he carried a big leather coat.

"Angela," he said deliberately, "I've always wanted to marry you. You remember I asked you once years ago, and you called me a simpleton and"—

"Nathan," she quavered, for she had penetrated his disguise, "I sent you away because I was the simpleton. I loved you and I wanted to marry you, but you were not romantic enough for me. So I have waited"—

"Waited for me?" he put in eagerly.

"Of course!"

He turned and waved a hand at the aeroplane. "Come with me, then, dear, and never dare to say that you have not had an adventure. Slip into this coat. There! The minister at Woburn is waiting for us. Oh, I'm a hero—quite an up to date one, sweetheart. And my motor will take us to Woburn and our wedding in a manner never dreamed of by you."

So he plucked a handful of white roses for a bridal bouquet, and then he lifted Angela into the passenger's seat and strapped her in. Then he took the pilot's place, started the motor of his own inventing and presently they were soaring at a safe height above the treetops.

The moonlight shone on the cross of the steeple of the Woburn church and guided them straight to the minister and future happiness.

The moonlight shone on the Blakes' rose garden and the deserted lawn. And Edna Blake and her husband, thrusting their heads from the windows of their adjoining rooms, stared into each other's surprised faces.

"You saw it?" asked Edna at last.

"Wouldn't have missed it for anything," declared Jim brazenly.

"Matchmaker!" she taunted.

"Why didn't you tell Nathan yourself?" asked Jim chuckling.

"He might have suspected me of matchmaking," she confessed. "As it is, they have revived their old love, married and I wonder if an elopement by aeroplane is romantic enough for Angela?"

"I guess that excuse of Angela's was made to cover up her tenderness for Nathan," said Jim eagerly.

"Oh, you mean that there would be no romance for Angela unless Nathan figured in it?"

"Yes, and I mean that, no matter in what guise Nathan came, he alone could be Angela's hero!"

How She Proposed

A Story For Leap Year

By ELINOR MARSH

Professor Poland of —— Woman's college was lecturing to his class, his subject being customs in India. He had excited considerable attention while dwelling upon the suttee, the girls showing great indignation at the immolation of a widow on her husband's funeral pyre. A hundred pens taking down the lecture scratched fiercely on as many notebooks. From the suttee he passed to the products of the country, and the pen scratching fell off so perceptibly that the professor was admonished that he was losing his hold on the interest of his class. He kept a number of slips, on each of which was written some bit of information calculated to attract the attention of young women, and, taking up one, he interpolated it into his lecture.

"Among the singular marriage customs of different people there is one in India which is very delicate."

Every pen of the hundred young ladies began to send forth a sympathetic sound.

"A father will hold his daughter for a price to be paid by the suitor before marriage. A parent having a very beautiful daughter or being able to settle on her a large dowry will sometimes put so high a price on her that such young men as desire her cannot afford to pay it. This makes a market for marriageable women. Widows may be had at a very low price."

A hum of expressions of amusement, approbation or dissatisfaction interrupted the lecturer.

"When a father finds that he has been holding his daughter too high and wishes, so to speak, to put her on the bargain counter [laughter] he does not tack a card to her on which is written 'Special,' as would be done in America if we had any such marriage custom. He adopts a much more poetic method. He marries her to a bouquet of flowers and throws her husband into a well. Since he must be drowned the bride becomes a widow. This is a notification to the young men that she may be had cheap."

Professor Poland, who was a young man of twenty-seven, paused and showed a white set of teeth under his dark mustache in a smile which was meant to be a partial unbending from his professional dignity. A ripple of amusement passed over his auditors, and he was about to return to a finish of the products of India when Belle Halliday, one of those girls who go to college to let off a surplus stock of mischief, arose to ask a question. Professor Poland paused and looked at her inquiringly.

"This being leap year," she said, "it occurs to me that this wedding to the flowers might be used by a girl as a delicate way of proposing to the man of her choice. It would be equivalent to saying, 'I may be had for a song; buy me.'"

The class tittered. The professor looked at the ceiling, then made the following reply:

"Your method, Miss Halliday, would involve a knowledge on the part of the man proposed to of the Indian custom in question, which he would not be likely to possess."

"Oh, I didn't think of that!" And Miss Halliday sat down in pretended confusion. But if there was any confusion in the matter it was with the professor, who was at the disadvantage of being one man among many women. He made an attempt to smile, then went on with his lecture, but did not again strike anything as interesting to his class as the matter of a girl being wedded to a bunch of flowers and her husband being thrown into a well.

Professor Poland's lecture was delivered in February, and Miss Belle Halliday was graduated in the following June at the foot of her class. As has been said, she did not go to college to study, but to have a good time. She was philosophic about it. "Why should I make a grind of myself when all the rest of the class are grinds? If I spent my time studying, who would do the devilry? If I were destined to make my living as a teacher I would need to apply myself. But I'm not to teach; I'm to be married."

"Got him picked out, Belle?" asked a chum.

"Yes."

"Has he proposed?"

"No, and I don't expect him to propose. This is leap year, and I intend to do the proposing myself."

"Going to be married to a bunch of flowers and throw your husband in a well?"

"Maybe."

The chief reason underlying Miss Halliday's indisposition to make a grind of herself she did not mention. Her father was a rich man, and she was an only child. Besides what property she might expect from him, she possessed a fortune in her own right inherited from a grandmother. Indeed it would be difficult to find a reason why she should, like the busy bee, improve each shining hour over dead languages, mathematics or philosophy for which she would have little or no use since the probability of her coming to want was very remote.

But Miss Halliday was bright enough to get what she wanted, and in one respect she knew very well what she wanted. She wanted Professor Poland. But Professor Poland was in receipt of an income of $1,500 a year and possibly might in the course of ten years be worth twice that to the cause of education. Miss Halliday knew very well that the modest young man would never have the assurance to propose for the hand of an heiress.

"I hope," she said to Professor Poland when they separated at commencement time, "that this will not end our acquaintance. I have always been greatly interested in your instruction and am indebted to you for having helped me through several examinations which would without your assistance have sent me home to finish my college course sitting round trying to look pretty. Mamma has directed me to invite you to spend a part of your vacation with us at our country place, and we shall look for you at an early date."

The invitation was followed up by one more specific, and in July Professor Poland found himself at Morning Glory—Belle had named the place from a flower she especially loved—a magnificent place in the center of spacious grounds and commanding a fine view of distant hills and nearby lakes. While Miss Halliday was in college she, like other students, was under his authority. It seemed to him now that the conditions were inverted. He appeared to himself nothing more than a pedagogue with so little income as to be barely able to tip the servants, while his former pupil was arrayed in "purple and fine linen" and occupying a social position to which he could never hope for an entree, and if he was granted an entree he would not be able to support it.

Miss Halliday's treatment of Professor Poland was calculated to throw him into a fever. She was not only gracious; she was as devoted to him as he would have been glad to be devoted to her were their positions reversed, lavishing on him such delicate attentions as a woman will lavish on a man she feels privileged to favor. In other words, a courtship was going on, in which the woman was doing the courting. The professor sometimes drifted, resigning himself to this delightful spell she was throwing about him, and sometimes suddenly came to a realization that he was standing on the brink of a precipice.

Now, if women were the privileged proposers they would doubtless acquit themselves far better than the men. At any rate, they are by a superior delicacy far better fitted for the purpose. To Miss Halliday what she was engaged in was as simple to her as the reconstruction of the Roman forum would have been to Professor Poland. When she was ready for his proposal she took him out into the garden and began to gather a bouquet of flowers.

"Are they for me?" asked the professor.

"For you? No. I'm going to be married."

The professor felt as if some one had knocked the life out of him.

"Who is the fortunate man?" he gasped.

"I'm not going to marry a man. I'm going to marry these flowers."

Several months had passed since Professor Poland had mentioned the Indian custom to his class, and it did not occur to him that Miss Halliday's words referred to what he had then said. However, he was not afraid of such a rival and somewhat recovered his equanimity.

"Oh!" was his sole reply.

Belle went on collecting flowers for a posy and when she had done so made a dumb show of affection for them. There was a stable on the place and a well from which to draw water, which was brought up by a pump. Belle went to the well, lifted a trap door and threw her bouquet down into the opening. Then, without remark, she sauntered back to the garden.

Now, Professor Poland was not quite so stupid about the art of love as might be supposed. He attended Miss Halliday on her visit to the well, and when she led him to a vine clad recess and sat down on a rustic seat a vague connection between what she had done and the Indian custom he had embodied in his lecture found lodgment in his brain. He realized that this might be in lieu of a proposal. Surely it was not encouragement for him to propose. It was either a proposal or it was nothing. If it was a proposal it was incumbent on him to respond. If he responded and Miss Halliday's act meant nothing he would be in an unfortunate position. If she meant what he suspected and he made no response he would still be in an unfortunate position. What should he do?

His inclinations decided him.

"The honor you do me is, I assure you, fully appreciated. Since I love you and have loved you for some time it is not an absence of love that causes me to hesitate. It is the disparity of our incomes."

"That, I think, can be easily arranged to your satisfaction. I am ready to settle upon you"—

"Pardon me; I cannot accept a settlement. If I marry you I shall do so with the expectation of always remaining self supporting. If I am to be a rich woman's husband you must be a poor professor's wife."

"I shall be very proud of your standing in your profession and shall do nothing to turn you away from it and your enjoyment of it."

And so it was arranged that the professor should still occupy his chair at the university. This he did for a time. Then his wife was calling on him continually for some duty in connection with her estates, and at last, finding that such duties took up the principal part of his time, he resigned his professorship and devoted his whole time to the management of a property which had by this time come to be considered a family matter.

DANCES AND DIES.

The May Fly Lives Only a Day, but Has a Gay Time While He Lasts.

Foolish insect! He lives only one day and spends the greater part of it dancing. You've doubtless been a guest at one of their dances, held over a stream on a warm summer's evening. You've seen the insects in swarms, leaping up and down in fancy steps and intricate figures. You've attended the dance of the May flies.

There is a general supposition that all May flies live only for a day. As a matter of fact, they will live several days if the atmosphere isn't too dry. Then again they may survive only through a single night. Even this impending fate cannot stop them from dancing.

This brief lived characteristic, however, applies only to the winged existence of the insect. Before they grow wings they pass through several stages, from the larvae, which live in water, through several molts and transformations. So while it is a May fly only for a short time it exists for a longer time, and perhaps we can pardon it if it dances during the brief period it lives in the air.

The fly has two pairs of wings, one pair much larger than the other, and two or three long, bristle-like tails. Its mouth is small and soft and not made for eating. The May fly has no time to eat. He's too busy dancing.—Philadelphia North American.

A GERMAN ARMY CORPS.

What It Means to Move and Feed and Form In Fighting Line.

In the nonmilitary mind there is only a vague idea as to the space required for an army corps.

According to a German writer, a German army corps consists of 41,000 men, 14,000 horses and 2,400 vehicles, including the cannon. Such a body of men and their belongings on a single road make a procession about thirty miles long.

Even when in fairly close touch with the enemy the length of a corps is about fifteen miles, and when the front detachments become engaged in a battle it is five or six hours before the men in the rear get into action to assist them.

An army of ten corps would fight on a front about thirty-seven miles long and a man who undertook to walk from one wing to the other would require twelve or fourteen hours to do it.

An army corps consumes nearly 300,000 pounds of food a day, about 100,000 pounds for the men and 200,000 pounds for the horses. Even under the most favorable conditions it requires a train of 150 wagons to bring up a day's food.

Tea Chewers of Siam.

"Chewing tea comes from Siam," said a traveler. "They call it mieng. It is in a plug, like chewing tobacco, and it has a villainous smell. This smell is due to the fermentation it has undergone. The tea that the Siamese employ for chewing purposes is a very coarse, rank plant. It is gathered like ordinary tea, but the leaves after being compressed into plugs are buried for fifteen days. They ferment during burial. On their resurrection they are very, very fragrant indeed. The Siamese boatmen chew tea. The rickshaw men chew it. The litterateurs chew it. They say it makes them work better. This is probably the truth, for I chewed a plug myself in Anam, and it exhilarated me strangely. But the aftermath was bad—a headache, smarting eyes and nervous depression."

English and French.

It is truly a graceful speech, the French tongue. Plain, homely things of life, so bald and bare and disheartening in the Anglo-Saxon, are less unlovely in the French. Indeed, the French word for "rags" is so pretty that we have conferred chiffon on one of our daintiest fabrics. But in the grace of the language lies also its weakness. It does not rise to the supreme utterances. I have been reading the Bible texts on the tombstones in the little cemetery of Chardonne. "L'Eternal est mon berger" can never rank in loftiness with "The Lord is my shepherd," nor "Que votre coeur ne se trouble point" with "Let not your heart be troubled."—Baltimore American.

Overlooked.

Wife—Mabel has just informed me that she is going to be married.

Husband—Have you seen the young man?

"Not yet."

"Um! Considering that she is our daughter, don't you think she should have consulted us first?"

"But you must remember, dear, that the girls of today are so thoughtless!"—Life.

Poetry.

"Write poetry by all means," a professor in the University of Minnesota has encouraged his class boldly. "But don't show it to any one," he adds, establishing his right to be called not only diplomatic, but a sincere worker for the general welfare.

Easy For Him.

"How do you make the distinction between popular and classical music?" asked the very young man.

"Oh, that's easy!" answered the dispenser of home grown philosophy. "It's popular if I enjoy it, and it is classic if I don't."—Chicago News.

Didn't Mean It That Way.

Willie—I say, ma, if dad was to die would he go to heaven? Ma—Hush, Willie! Who's been putting such ridiculous thoughts into your head!—London Opinion.

THE NORTHEAST PASSAGE.

Only Two Expeditions Succeeded In Getting Through It.

Most attempts of European countries to find a comparatively short passage from the Atlantic to oriental countries were by way of the northwest passage, north of America, because, having first tried the northeast passage, north of Europe and Asia, and in every instance having met with dire failure, they concentrated attention upon the northwest passage as probably more feasible.

Practically all the arctic expeditions from Sir John Ross to Sir John Franklin were fitted out most of all to find the northwest passage. The passage was found during the search for the lost party of Sir John Franklin, but it was never traversed by a ship till Amundsen took his little boat, the Gjoa, through it in August, 1905.

The attempts to make the northeast passage began with the hardy Dutch sailor Barents in 1595, whose party was the first to spend the dark winter night in the arctic "in most greate cold and extreme miserie." The only achievement of the northeast passage prior to Vilkitski's success in 1914-15 was by Baron A. E. Nordensjold, who sailed from Tromsoe with his Swedish expedition in June, 1878, triumphed over the great obstacle of Cape Chelyuskin and was within 120 miles of Bering strait when winter closed upon him. He entered Bering strait in July, 1879, thirteen months from the time he sailed.—Cyrus C. Adams in New York Times.

LET IN THE LIGHT.

Faded Carpets Are Not as Pitiful as Faded Cheeks.

Fresh air enthusiasts are familiar enough to most of us, but we hear less of enthusiasm for light. Darkened parlors, darkened bedrooms, darkened sickrooms are too common.

Sir B. W. Richardson, the eminent London scientist and physician, declared that when the professors of healing enter a sickroom their first words in most cases ought to be Goethe's dying exclamation, "More light, more light!"

The light of the sun is God's own microbe killer, germicide, disinfectant, prophylactic, sickness healer. There is no physician, no chemical antidote, no compounded prescription to be compared with sunlight. Without it nature could not perform her functions. Man, beast, bird, insect would fall victims to the deadly gases that would prevail. The horrid mists and deadly gases are dispersed and decomposed by the action of light.

Let it in, everywhere! Let the light in more and more abundantly. Faded carpets are not as pitiful as faded cheeks. Spoiled cushions are trivial compared with spoiled health. Darkened rooms are too suggestive of darkened lives.—Christian Herald.

TIRES OF A MOTORCAR.

Why They Are Found Heated After a Long and Fast Run.

It is well known that after a long and fast run the tires of an automobile are found to be very hot, and many have supposed this is the result of the friction of the tire on the road. The Scientific American says that such is not the case, at least as to the greater portion of the heat.

"The real cause of heating," says that magazine, "is the internal friction of the tire itself, for as the tire is being constantly deflected by contact with the road the various plies, or layers, which compose the tire do not act uniformly, and consequently there is more or less motion between them that results in friction and heat. The greater the change in shape in the tire as it contacts with the road the greater will be the friction.

"Of course the harder the tire is pumped the less will be the friction, but it is evident that, while a perfectly rigid tire would generate but little heat, it would fail in giving easy riding. So we must put up with some heating and consequent wear of the tire. The subject is one that is being successfully studied by the tiremaker."

THE COMING INVASION

Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, chief consulting engineer of the General Electric Company, Schenectady, looks for the establishment of an international police force following the European war. Dr. Steinmetz is German by birth and an American by adoption. He says: "With the disbanding of the armies and the reduction of the navies, leaving only the required police forces, all Europe will go to work. The millions of fighting men will be restored to the industries and the arts where they belong. Then will come the great problem of the United States. This country surely has an invasion to fear, but an invasion of goods, not of armed men, of freight ships, not of war ships." Whether we have an international police force or not, the United States is scheduled for just that sort of thing if a Democratic near-free-trade tariff law is on the statue books when the industries of Europe again begin to hum.

INEZ HERRARA

A Story of Old Mexico

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the early part of the nineteenth century Don Manuel Herrara, a grandee of Spain, suddenly sold all his effects in that country and set sail for Mexico. The reason for this change of residence was that Don Manuel's daughter, Inez, a girl of fifteen, had become infatuated with Jose Alvarez, a young man whose reputation was none of the best. Alvarez, though but twenty-five years of age, had already been a leader of several uprisings against the government, and his methods indicated not only a turbulent disposition, but that he was conscienceless. By changing his residence from the old to the new world Don Manuel hoped to rid his daughter of such a suitor.

Don Manuel, on arriving in Mexico, purchased a ranch in the state of Durango, near the base of the Sierra Madre chain of mountains. On the property he built a handsome residence and became an influential citizen of the country. His wife, who had been loath to quit Spain, left her heart there. But Inez took kindly to the new country. Young as she was, she had had no taste of the formal life led by the higher classes in Spain and delighted in the freedom she was accorded in Mexico.

Inez had not been in her new home long before she was considered the best horsewoman in the state. She grew very fond of hunting and, though living in a country always more or less subject to lawlessness, did not fear to go anywhere alone. This her father permitted because he could not prevent it, though so great was her popularity among those living in the vicinity of her home that he felt she was always in a measure protected. Added to this, she was always well armed.

Among Inez's many suitors was Miguel Coral, a young man who had when he came of age inherited a hacienda near that of the Herraras. He was as much in favor with Don Manuel as Jose Alvarez had been in disfavor. Coral was the soul of honor, and Don Miguel did not hesitate to trust Inez with him anywhere. Time and absence seemed to have cured her of her infatuation for Jose. At any rate she never mentioned him and turned a not unwilling ear to Miguel. In the hunting season Inez was fond of riding up among the foothills of the mountains for game, and Miguel was often her attendant on these excursions. This was permitted not because Mexican etiquette allowed a young girl to go off with a man alone, but because Inez had a code of etiquette of her own. What she did another could not do, and much of what others did she disdained to do, for keeping girls under watch tends to make them deceitful.

When the Herraras had lived in Mexico eight years and soon after a revolution which had been unsuccessful the Sierra Madre mountains became the lair of a band of robbers, who made occasional descents upon the people of Durango, each time carrying off booty or levying contributions of money. Every ranch or hacienda that was worth plundering except that of Don Manuel Herrara was robbed. Why he was left immune while others far less promising of plunder were attacked was a mystery.

One thing, and one only, was known about the band. It was composed of persons that had been engaged in the unsuccessful recent revolution in the City of Mexico. It was reported that their leader had been one of the lieutenants of the leader of the insurgents, and some said that he was the leader himself. At any rate but few of the insurgents were captured; but, being hunted for their lives, most of them took to inaccessible points and lived by robbery.

In the autumn Inez was eager to go up into the hunting grounds. Her father objected to her going. The lair of the robbers was supposed to be in the region where she usually hunted, but they had been quiet for some time, and it was surmised that, having gained all they could get from Durango, they had gone elsewhere. Inez, who seemed to have a fancy for danger, started on horseback one morning alone to spend the day at her favorite sport. Besides her rifle she carried pistols in her holster and a knife.

Having attained considerable height, she was riding on a plateau when she met a horseman coming toward her. He was dressed in the costume of a Mexican gentleman, including the gaudy trappings. Bringing her rifle to a position which would enable her to use it readily, Inez rode on. The man drew rein a few paces from the point of meeting. She, too, stopped.

What was her astonishment to recognize Jose Alvarez. He had changed somewhat in his appearance since their separation, but not from age. That devil may care look that had fascinated her when she had scarcely budded into womanhood had become intensified. And Inez saw what she was blind to then—the spirit of evil in him.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, biting her lip to maintain her courage.

"I came here because you are here. I cannot live without you."

His voice was soft and smooth, that same voice in which he had made love to her in Spain. It caused her bosom to rise and fall more quickly than from fear.

"You have lived eight years without me."

"You were a child when we parted. I could not rely on one so young. Now you are a woman."

"As a woman I shall not act as a child."

"Then you no longer love me?"

She hesitated. She did not know whether she did or did not. Her heart was fluttering.

"You are mine. You were born to be mine. You shall be mine."

There was something in his looks, his tone of voice, when he said this that excited not exactly fear, but a realization that she had to deal with one who might make trouble for others, if not herself. She was drawing quicker breaths, but said nothing. Emboldened by her silence, he continued:

"I am going with you to your father to demand your hand."

"And suppose he refuses you?"

"You will not fail me."

Inez felt that this was an evasion. Something in the man told her that he was changed from what she had believed him to be when she was a girl. He had been sinking morally from what he had been then, and though she knew nothing of this descent she felt the difference. She was not afraid of him for herself, but for others. The image of Miguel Coral came up before her, and between him and this man she had loved so passionately she saw a great difference. She dreaded a meeting between them. She concluded to show Jose that all was over between him and her, trusting that he would leave her and those she feared for in peace.

"Jose," she said, "my love for you was that of a child. As a woman I will never be yours. I am going home. Goodby."

She said this resolutely, at the same time riding on. She did not look back. Had she done so she would have seen him start to follow her, then change his mind and turn away.

When a bad man, a reckless man, is in love there is no knowing what he will do. We constantly read in the daily journals of such men killing the women they love, then themselves. Jose Alvarez's love that had been no great passion for the child was fanned into a flame at meeting her again as a woman. He cared nothing for his life, and he was ready to take any chance to gain his ends. It was his disposition to do desperate deeds that had fascinated her as a child. He believed that he could play the same game with her as a woman.

One day Don Manuel, his wife, his daughter and others of the household were sitting on the veranda of the house when a horseman rode up to the gate, dismounted and came up the walk to the house. Inez recognized Jose Alvarez at once. The others did not recognize him till he had reached the veranda and, holding his conical hat in his hand, thus addressed Don Manuel:

"Senor, I am Jose Alvarez. When your daughter was budding into womanhood you refused her to me. Now that she is a woman and capable of deciding for herself I have come again to ask you for her."

"There is no need," said Inez, rising and confronting him, "for you to ask my father for me, for you have my own answer refusing you."

It was evident that his bold stroke was not successful. But he had not hoped for success at once. He was about to speak again when all were startled by a shot. Alvarez paused and clapped his hand to a pistol at his side. From every direction men were seen converging upon the house. When they came nearer all were seen to be carrying rifles in a position for immediate use. In advance of the others was Miguel Coral, and he seemed to be their leader.

Alvarez understood what this meant, though the others with him did not. He knew that it was a matter of life and death with him or rather the kind of a death he should die, for if these men who were coming took him—and their taking him was inevitable—he would be executed for a felon, and he was thinking of taking his own life. Raising a pistol to his head, he looked a farewell to Inez. That look prevented his intended action. Don Manuel, who was now beside him and slightly in his rear, knocked the weapon from his hand.

Those coming closed in on Alvarez and seized him.

"What does it all mean?" asked Don Manuel.

"This man," replied Miguel, "recently led a revolution in the City of Mexico to depose the president and put himself in his place. The movement was a lamentable failure, but its leader escaped and with a number of his men took to the mountains above us, and it is they who have been robbing us. Recently I organized a force to hunt them down. We were in the mountains watching an opportunity to bag them when one of our men saw this one about to descend the mountain and recognized him, having been robbed by him. We followed him and tracked him here."

"What are you going to do with him?" asked Inez excitedly.

"Take him to the capital."

"Jose," she continued, "if I can save you will you promise to quit Mexico never to return?"

"Inez," said her father sternly, "you cannot save him;" then to the others, "Take him away."

Alvarez was taken to Mexico, where he was executed by the garrote. Most of his band, deprived of their leader, were captured. Inez was kept in ignorance of the fate of the man she formerly loved. Indeed, she never asked what had become of him, for she married Miguel Coral.

GAME WARDEN OF THE GULF

Captain Sprinkle of the Royal Tern Is an Efficient Protector of Bird Life.

The Royal Tern, a boat which is the property of the Audubon society, is commanded by Capt. William Sprinkle, born and bred on this gulf coast, who knows the sea fowl, and the islands where they breed and dwell, as he knows the winds and the lovely, smiling, treacherous gulf waters. He is game warden and he and the Royal Tern are the police force of more than five hundred square miles of sandbars, shallow waters and intricate channels. The man and the boat are two of the chief obstacles in the way of the poachers, the plume hunters and eggers, who always threaten these bird sanctuaries.

Many of these poachers are at heart good men, who follow their fathers' business, just as respectable men on the seacoast once followed the business of wrecking. But when times change and a once acknowledged trade comes under the ban of the law the character of those following it also changes for the worse. Wreckers are no longer respectable, and plume hunters and eggers are sinking to the same level.

The illegal business of killing breeding birds, of leaving nestlings to starve wholesale, and of general ruthless extermination more and more tends to attract men of the same moral category as those who sell whisky to Indians and combine the running of "blind pigs" with highway robbery and murder for hire. In Florida one of the best game wardens of the Audubon society was killed by these sordid bird butchers.—Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's Magazine.

READING FOR THE SOLDIERS

Germany Sending Motor Trucks With Books to Men on the Fighting Front.

"Books for soldiers" has become the slogan of a great part of the stay-at-home population of Germany, and the popularity of the "Bildungskanone" (educational cannon), as the field circulating libraries are called by the men in gray, seems almost to rival that of the famous "Gulaschkanone," which supply the hot meals that keep the kaiser's fighters in condition.

The task of distributing the books has been taken over by a special committee, headed by Undersecretary Conze, which has begun to send out the libraries on wheels, and which hopes to have 100 of them in service within a short time.

These "Bildungskanone," as described in the Berliner Tageblatt, consist of big motor trucks carrying from 1,000 to 1,500 volumes each, arranged on shelves and looked after by a librarian. The first five of the field libraries were sent to the eastern front. As the roads in Poland and Serbia in some cases do not admit of the use of the heavy lorries, arrangements have been made for forwarding the books in special chests.

It is estimated that one motor library will be sufficient for 20,000 men.

Zeppelin Victims.

French illustrated newspapers gave much space to depicting the scenes attending the funeral of the men, women and children killed in the recent raid of the Zeppelin airships on Paris. All the city was in the streets along which the cortege with the 23 bodies, each on a separate gun carriage, were taken to the famous cemetery of Pere la Chaise. Each coffin was draped with the tricolor of France. Troops lined the way and marched in the processional ranks. The funeral was a national tribute and was of a deeply sorrowful and pathetic character. Hundreds of persons in the great concourse, men as well as women, were carried away by their emotions, and though of no kin to the dead were unable to restrain their tears. It was said that this was the most impressive funeral ever known within more than a hundred years and that the "gay city" was a city of gloom and sorrow such as she had not been even when news of slaughter had come from the front.

The British Museum.

In the early years of the British museum, whose treasures are to be locked up from the general public till after the war, the days of opening were fewer than now. Three days a week were considered enough. Economy ruled then also. No generous grant of public money aided the foundation of the museum. A public lottery provided the sinews of war. By this means $465,000 was raised, $100,000 of which went to Sir Hans Sloane's executors, $50,000 to the earl and countess of Oxford for the Harleian manuscripts, and $50,000 to Lord Halifax for Montague house. When the pantechnicons paid for by the proceeds of the lottery had done their duty in the removal of the curiosities, Montague house was thrown open with great ceremony on January 15, 1759.—London Chronicle.

The Montenegrin's Arms.

To ask a Montenegrin to surrender his firearms, even to the family heirloom, as the Austrians are now proposing, is like asking a Covenanter to surrender his Bible. A Black mountain proverb runs: "You might as well take from me my brother as my rifle." The Montenegrin adores his revolver as a doting father does a beautiful daughter; and baby in his cradle is given the butt-end to play with. A Montenegrin without a rifle is one of those incredible things with which the war is every now and then surprising us.

RISKED LIFE FOR HIS PIPE

British Seaman Braved Death to Carry Off Insignificant Article to Which He Was Attached.

A merchant seaman, ashore for a brief spell after many thrilling adventures in the vicinity of Gallipoli, where he has been engaged in landing stores in the dead of night, tells of a delightful little incident which has hitherto escaped publication, says London Answers.

The incident happened at the time when submarines were unpleasantly active in the middle seas.

A trim little craft lay in the grasp of an Austrian submarine and, after a game effort to show her heels to the submarine, the ship's papers had been seized and the crew had taken to the boats. The submarine stood grimly by with guns trained and the final scene was about to be enacted.

Before the commander of the U-boat gave the fatal order, however, it was noticed that one of the ship's boats had pulled back to the vessel and that a grimy figure in blue overalls was clambering back over the side.

Even Austrian submarine commanders are curious, and he held back the order to fire, to await developments. A full minute passed and, wearying of the delay, the submarine chief motioned to the gunners. Almost simultaneously the blue-coated figure reappeared. Leisurely he made his way towards the waiting boat, and then it was those puzzled Austrians saw what his important mission had been.

In his left hand was an old, worn rubber pouch, and with his right hand he clutched a nut-brown clay pipe.

KEEPING THE TRENCHES DRY

Water Continually Pumped From Positions Which the French Are Occupying.

The French made their trenches as comfortable as possible for the benefit of the troops during the winter months. Many of the trenches are paved and the water was kept out of them by means of powerful pumps. There are drain pits which have been sunk along the whole length inside the trenches, and the pumps are used to force the water from these pits to the outside.

The walls of the trenches are strengthened with hurdles to prevent landslides. The bottom of the trenches are carefully beaten down, leveled and covered with plank or straw, and the earthen roofs are made stronger by sheets of zinc. The heating, which is adequate, is furnished by charcoal braziers. Farther back from the trenches, along the second line, are erected little wooden huts, built with double walls to keep out the cold, with slate roofs, and in most cases with flowers raised above the level of the ground. The beds consist of wire netting stretched over wooden frames, with a covering of straw packing and a supply of warm blankets.

In the huts stoves are furnished. Fuel is very plentiful and easily obtained because the shells of the enemy have scattered huge branches from the trees and splintered them ready for burning. The soldiers are given two good meals a day, and in the case of the men who are most exposed there is an extra ration of meat. Hot drinks are furnished, such as tea and coffee with a fixed measure of alcohol when the temperature requires it.

Hotel Puts Tents on Roof.

High in the air on the broad roof of the Hotel Lenox several tents have been pitched for the benefit of guests who wish to sleep in the open, says the Boston Post.

So far as is known, this is the first time that a Boston hotel has arranged for sleeping accommodations on the roof, the idea being to provide fresh air right in the heart of the city.

Among the first to try out the plan was Miss Ora McBride, widely known among magazine illustrators, and Miss Helen Walsh, a stenographer. After the fact became known that tents had been erected on the roof, many of the guests of the hotel flocked there, accompanied by moving-picture men, newspaper photographers and reporters.

The tents are what are known as "arctics." They are heavy and windproof, and give plenty of room for iron cots, "made up" with either blankets or sleeping bags.

"Gaspipe Cavalry."

The motorcycle and bicycle scouts and dispatch riders of the British army in France are familiarly known as the "Gaspipe Cavalry"—a good example of Tommy Atkins' fondness for slang nomenclature.

Treasurer's Sale of Unseated Land

for non-payment of taxes for the years 1914 and 1915, as well as certain lots of Seated Land, in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Assembly, entitled "An Act directing the mode of selling unseated lands for taxes and other purposes," passed the 13th day of March 1815, and the various supplements thereof, together with the other various Acts of Assembly relating thereto, I, David Chambers, Treasurer of the County of Centre, hereby give notice to all persons concerned, that unless the taxes due and remaining unpaid on the following described tracts or parts of tracts of unseated land, as well as such lots of seated land, situated in said County of Centre, be paid before the day of sale, the whole or such part of each tract of said lands as will pay the taxes and costs chargeable thereon, will be exposed to public sale or outcry, at the Court House in the Borough of Bellefonte, in said county, commencing on the second Monday of June next (the 12th day thereof) and continuing, by adjournment from day to day, until all are sold.

How the Town of Ladybird Was Depopulated

An Episode of May Day

By F. A. MITCHEL

What we now call the middle west was settled up in spots by very different peoples, and these spots, now cities or towns, show the differences to this day. One place will have been settled by refined people, and their descendants are refined; another will have been settled by a rough class, and its population will be rough today.

When one of these spots was in embryo—we will call it Eaglebird—its inhabitants were not naturally rough, but they were all men, and men without women will in time degenerate into wild beasts. No woman would go to Eaglebird because there were no women there. One or two of the men went east at different times to marry a sweetheart, but came back alone. When the girls learned that Eaglebird was exclusively a man town they invariably declined to exchange refined surroundings for a den.

There was a town not far distant from Eaglebird that we will call Ladybird. When the former was settled the latter had been a town for two decades. True, the Ladybirdians had run out the Indians, but they had all come to the region, men and women together, from Connecticut, where there was a college, and there was not a poorly educated person among them. But Ladybird had not been favorably located for trade, and its young men when grown sought busier fields of labor, while their sisters remained where they were. Instead of manufactures, there were libraries, and the old folks and the girls were very intellectual.

Eaglebird had been settled for a land speculation. Ten men with money had purchased a tract for a song and secured others to join them in settling it by offering a share in the property. In this way some forty men, mostly young and all unmarried, were secured as emigrants for the enterprise. They built a town, but no more men came, and owing to the absence of women there were no children.

O'Brien, who was the originator of the scheme, one day called a meeting in the town hall, a building 12 by 18, used principally for poker parties, and thus addressed the gathering:

"Gentlemen, if we can't get some women for wives we'll have to give up this scheme and go somewhere else. I've a proposition to make. There are more than fifty single women in Ladybird. Efforts have been made to induce some of them to marry our fellows, but they have turned up their noses at us. What do you say to swooping down on 'em and carrying 'em off?"

The idea took like wildfire. Naturally, the youngest men were the most enthusiastic. Thirty men agreed to join the abductors, and no one of them was over thirty years old, while the great majority were not twenty-five. This looked well for the scheme, for the girls they were to run off had nearly all been born since the settlement of Ladybird and were therefore young.

The very next day after the proposal of the abduction scheme a lady and her husband who were driving through the country with a view to establishing an emigration scheme stopped at Eaglebird and asked for entertainment for the night. They were accommodated, and so long had it been since the men had seen a woman that they treated the lady as though she were a queen. Every man in the town offered to serve her. In the evening they asked if she would not talk to them. It didn't matter what she said; they only wished to listen to the sweet, soft voice of a woman. She consented, and all adjourned to the town hall, where the lady was given a seat on a platform at one end of the room. This is what she said to them:

"Gentlemen, I don't wonder you wish to listen to a woman's voice. You are all refined men, roughened by living without woman's quieting influence. What you need is wives"—

There was a howl of response to this that broke in upon the address. One man whose voice drowned the others gave away the scheme to abduct the young Ladybirds. He was howled down for doing so, since it was to be expected that he had rendered it abortive. When some sort of order was restored the lady spoke again:

"I am not sure but what your plan may be advisable."

This drew forth a burst of applause.

"Perhaps many of you," the lady continued, "who are educated men may call to mind how those men who settled Rome as you have settled Eaglebird invited their neighbors, the Sabines, to a feast and carried off their daughters. The women became attached to their husbands, and when their fathers and brothers attacked the Romans the women interposed and stopped the fight."

After another howl of approval the lady went on:

"I wouldn't advise so treacherous a method as inviting the Ladybirders to a feast. It is not necessary. Rather wait for some celebration during which the girls are out in a body. My husband and I intend to pass through Ladybird, and I will make inquiries as to a favorable time for your enterprise and advise you."

"Good! Bully! And you won't give us away?" cried the crowd.

The lady declared that she would not give them away, and she was not sure but that her conscience would permit her to aid them. The meeting broke up with wild cheers for their visitor, aider and abetter, and the next morning, amid another round of cheers, the couple drove away.

In a few days a message came from the late visitor, who signed herself Elizabeth Harrison, stating that in a few days May day would be celebrated at Ladybird on the square around which the town was built and that at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the young people would dance around a maypole. The children would first do the dancing, then the young men and women. But since there were but two or three young men in the town and they either invalids or too spiritless to go away from such a dull place they did not count. Therefore it was expected that some twenty-five or thirty young girls would be dancing together, constituting a fine flock of Ladybirds to be seized and carried away.

Mrs. Harrison strongly advised preparing a portion of Eaglebird for their reception and that they be placed there together by themselves. No one should be forced into marriage; they should simply be held until married from choice or it was evident that they preferred to return to Ladybird.

That they had been fortunate in securing the services and advice of a woman was evident to all. Some who had believed that the scheme would be the ruin of Eaglebird began to think that a number of the girls could be induced to remain with them as wives. What such persons chiefly dreaded was that the captives would feel outraged at their abduction and that most of them, taking to flight, would make good an escape.

Preparations were at once begun for the raid in accordance with Mrs. Harrison's advice. One end of the town was set apart for the girls and beautified so far as the men could beautify it, though, to tell the truth, this consisted chiefly in cleaning up, whitewashing, etc. There was also a cleaning up of the prospective husbands. There were but two or three razors in the town, and these were in constant requisition. Several men were appointed hair cutters and did a lot of shearing. The clothes the men had had come in from the east and were got out and furbished. Altogether after the polishing a very presentable set of young men were ready for courtship and matrimony.

May day opened bright and beautiful. All the teams in the town were harnessed, and some thirty good and true men started for Ladybird. At noon they stopped in a wood a few miles from the town for lunch and rest, but by 2 o'clock were again on the march. About 3 they sent out a mounted scout to watch for the time fitted for the attack and waited.

Over the waving grass and wild flowers, through the young leaves, came the sound of feminine voices mixed merrily. Every man started to his feet. In a few minutes the scout rode into camp and reported that the girls were dancing about the maypole. O'Brien, who was leader, gave the order to start, and, advancing to the cover of trees overhanging certain houses of the town, they left their teams and, forming a line of battle, at a given signal moved forward in perfect silence upon the enemy.

Their advance was heralded by a scream, but before they were discovered they were within striking distance. What surprised them was that instead of running away the girls sank down where they were, covering their faces and shrieking. So expeditious were the abductors that before the elderly folks of the town could even collect to observe what was going on every girl had been carried off and placed on a wagon.

Never was an abduction more easily effected. A few of the girls resisted as they were hurried away, but whether or no they deemed resistance useless their struggles were not violent. Once in the wagons, with a guard on either side, they remained quietly where they were, and the caravan set out for Eaglebird.

They had not been long on the way when a guard at one of the wagons went forward to O'Brien and said:

"Some of the girls in the wagon I'm with are snickering."

"Snickering? Are you sure it's not hysteria?"

"Hysterics be hanged. It's a girl's real snicker."

Then came other reports of the same kind, and presently the girls began to take note of their abductors, then to ask what they were going to do with them, and before long the train was much like a picnic party.

Well, to make a long story short, Mrs. Harrison on her visit to Ladybird had told of the predicament of a lot of nice young men going downward for want of wives, and after duly preparing the young ladies' minds revealed the coming raid. Gradually she won them over to permitting themselves to be abducted, assuring them that they would not be forced to marry unless they wished.

Within a few hours after the arrival of the train at Eaglebird there was a wedding, and before the day was ended there were two more. The number of spinsters each day grew beautifully less, and in the end but two of them returned to Ladybird.

Eaglebird is now quite a sizable town, comprising churches, schools and all the requisites of civilization. A few great-grandfathers of the present generation are still honored as having been among the band that placed the town on a permanent basis by the raid on Ladybird. The latter town has disappeared, there being no trace of it left except a cemetery, in which has grown up a forest of trees

ENGINEERS TO SURVEY INDUSTRY

U. S. Naval Consulting Board Names Directors For Work.

FIVE FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

George Steward Davison, Julian Kennedy and Raymond Foss Bacon of Pittsburg, Vance C. McCormick of Harrisburg and Paul Spencer of Ardmore Have Been Selected to Tabulate Industrial Preparedness.

Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the Committee on Industrial Preparedness of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, today announced the names of the 250 state directors, formed into boards of five men each, who under the committee's direction, are setting out to make a complete survey of American industry for the first time in the history of the United States government.

HOWARD E. COFFIN,
Chairman Committee on Industria Preparedness.

These state directors will be under the immediate guidance of W. S. Gifford, chief statistician of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, who is acting as supervising director of the work. Under them will work the more than 30,000 highly educated members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Chemical society.

The state directors, who also become associate members of the naval consulting board, have just received appointment by the secretary of the navy. In making public their names Mr. Coffin said.

"The names and standing of these men speak for themselves. They have been selected by their own professional associates with the only standard that of efficiency and integrity. They work without pay; indeed, the services of many of them could not be bought. In my judgment they form a vast, flexible organization, the like of which has never been known in this or any other country of the world, and an organization, moreover, which from top to bottom is absolutely nonpolitical."

The directors from this state are as follows:

Julian Kennedy of Pittsburgh, from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, is a consulting engineer, who was born 1852 in Ohio and educated at Yale, taking the honorary degree of doctor of engineering from the Stevens Institute of Technology, and is a member of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the British Iron and Steel institute and the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce.

George Stewart Davison of Pittsburgh, from the American Society of Civil Engineers, is president of the Gulf Refining company, the Gulf Pipe Line company, the Sharpsville Furnace company and the Basic Products company and vice president of the Pennsylvania Water company; was born in 1856 at Pittsburgh and educated at the Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, is a member of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, the New England Waterworks association and the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce and has designed, constructed and operated waterworks, railroads, electric railways and been connected with oil production and transportation.

Vance C. McCormick of Harrisburg, from the American Institute of Mining Engineers, is a publisher and trustee of estates and has banking, mining, real estate and agricultural interests; was born in 1876 at Harrisburg and educated at Harrisburg academy, Phillips Andover academy and Yale, holding two degrees; is a member of the Engineering Society of Central Pennsylvania, the Yale Engineering society, the National Municipal league and the Yale corporation, and is president of the Harrisburg Municipal league, trustee of Pennsylvania State college and director, Class C, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, and has been common councilman and mayor of Harrisburg, as well as candidate for governor in 1914.

Raymond Foss Bacon of Pittsburgh, from the American Chemical society, is director of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh; was born 1880 in Indiana and educated at the University of De Pauw and of Chicago; holds three degrees and is a member of the Society of Chemical Industry, the American Electro-Chemical society, the Societe Chimique of France, the American Ceramic society and was fellow of chemistry at the University of Chicago 1901-4. He was for two years chemical instructor at De Pauw university, for two years professor of chemistry at Vincennes university, for five years chemist of the United States bureau of science in the Philippine Islands, for two years assistant chemist at the United States bureau of chemistry and has been director of the Mellon institute since 1914.

RAYMOND FOSS BACON.

Paul Spencer of Ardmore, from the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, is electrical engineer for the United Gas Improvement company; was born 1866 in New Jersey and educated at Yale and the Stevens Institute of Technology, holding two degrees; is a fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and member of the National Electric Light association, the Illuminating Engineering society and the Franklin institute of Philadelphia.

Brint Wallace departed on Monday for Shamokin, where he has employment on a building operation.

Mrs. Sarah Satterfield was among those to take in the Easter excursion to Atlantic City last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lentz and daughters, Mildred and Hazel, visited in Harrisburg over Sunday.

Don Wallace was a visitor this week to Akron, Ohio, where his parents have been spending some time lately.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Topelt, of Brooklyn, were Easter visitors here with the latter's mother, Mrs. R. S. Brouse.

John Krebs last week removed his family and household effects to Lewistown where he is employed in the steel mills.

Mr. and Mrs. William Whitmer were in Snow Shoe last Saturday attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Lemuel Watson.

George Schenck and his bright little daughter Marguerite, of Blanchard, were visitors in town for the Odd Fellows celebration yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beck, of Wilmerding, were arrivals here last week to visit over Easter with the latter's mother, Mrs. John Harrison.

Edward Doll came over from Altoona last week to spend several days along the trout streams and while here visited with his father, Louis Doll, on Bishop Street.

Rev. C. W. Winey, of Altoona, is spending a few days in town this week, his two-fold mission being to do some trout fishing and participate in the Odd Fellows celebration.

I. J. Dreese, of Lemont, who handles the Oakland line of automobiles, is in Philadelphia this week looking after shipments of cars. His daughter, Miss Miriam Dreese, accompanied him on a shopping trip.

A most cordial invitation is extended to all the women of Bellefonte and vicinity to attend a series of free lectures on First Aid. The object of these lectures is to enable the women to prepare themselves in an efficient manner against calamity in any form. The first lecture will be delivered by a physician in the Directors' room in the new High School, Tuesday, May the 2nd, at 4.15 o'clock.

Professor C. L. Gramley, of Rebersburg, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Assembly, was a Bellefonte visitor between trains on Saturday, last. The Professor says that his duties teaching school have prevented his conducting as active a canvass for votes as he would like to make, but that he is doing the best he can under the circumstances. He expresses confidence in the outcome at the primaries.

Jasper, the little son of James Solt, was knocked down and bruised by John Shugert's automobile last Saturday evening. The accident happened at the Aiken corner, on Allegheny Street, and while regrettable seemingly could not be avoided. The youngster was intently interested in recovering a baseball and backed almost directly in front of the car. Fortunately he escaped with no broken bones. He was removed to the hospital where it was found that beyond being bruised he was all right.

Three Bellefonte young men last week took a little flyer to Williamsport, traveling via the side-door palace car plan. All went well until they landed in the Williamsport freight yards, when a railroad officer loomed up from nowhere and placed the trio under arrest for illegal train riding. Two of the group submitted to arrest and managed to scrape up $9 each for fine and costs. The third member gave the officer the merry laugh and disappeared. He returned home and considered the incident closed until an officer from Williamsport showed up here and placed him under arrest. There was nothing for the young offender to do but return to Williamsport with the officer for a hearing.

Burns Crider spent several days this week in Eagleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheffler were recent visitors to Unionville.

Luther Crissman spent the week-end with friends in Sunbury.

Thomas Shaughnessy was a visitor this week to Pittsburgh.

Ferguson Parker has been visiting with friends in Johnstown.

Miss Marie Montgomery visited this week with Tyrone friends.

Miss Harriet Bullock has been visiting with friends in Harrisburg.

John N. Lane is visiting in Leetonia, Ohio, with his son James.

Miss Connegan visited over Easter with her brother John in Tyrone.

Nevin Wetzel, of Pennsgrove, N. J., is visiting with home friends in town.

Horse Sale Day at Geiss' Livery, Bellefonte, Pa.,—Saturday, April 29th.

District Attorney James C. Furst was a business visitor to Philipsburg last week.

Jeff Lykens, of Altoona, formerly of Scotia, was in town on Wednesday for the big Odd Fellows celebration.

Have you any heavy horses to sell? Bring them to Geiss' Livery on Saturday, April 29th.

William Aikey, of Curtin, transacted business and greeted friends in town on Saturday of last week.

Sturgeon Fulcomer, son of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fulcomer, visited on Easter Sunday with relatives in Lebanon.

Mr. and Mrs. Win Love and three children are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Miller in Williamsport.

Mr. and Mrs. Dumont, of New York City, spent Easter with Mrs. Mary Powers, on Spring Street. Mrs. Dumont will remain for several weeks.

Allen S. Garman, postmaster at Tyrone, couldn't resist the appeal of the brass bands and came to town on Wednesday to see the Odd Fellows parade.

David Howard, of Bald Eagle, was a business visitor in town between trains on Monday. Mr. Howard is a staunch Republican and naturally is deeply interested in the approaching campaign.

Mrs. G. F. Hoy, of Hublersburg, and and Miss Jane Rupert, of Beech Creek, were admitted to the Lock Haven hospital on Monday as surgical patients. On the same day Mrs. Orlando Smith, of Howard, and George Sisco, of Snow Shoe, were discharged from the institution.

Cyril Moerschbacher, who has a nice position at Lewistown, spent several days this week in town with his wife and baby. A splinter of steel lodged in his right eye, necessitating his laying off for a short time. He returned to Lewistown today.

Henry B. Eberly, City Controller of Williamsport and secretary of the Odd Fellows Anniversary Association, who suffered a stroke of paralysis while in Bellefonte on Wednesday of last week, is recovering slowly at the hospital here. His condition for a time was so grave that the attending physicians believed he could not recover. It is thought he will be able to return home in the near future.

Representative Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg, greeted friends in town for a few hours last Friday and returned to town this week to participate in the Odd Fellows celebration. Mr. Scott has begun active campaigning for renomination for the Assembly on the Republican ticket, and plans visiting as many sections of the county as possible during the next few weeks. Harry assures his friends that he will be returned a winner at the primaries on May 16th.

H. Cletus Jones, who was marshal of the third division in the Odd Fellows parade yesterday, is a successful book publisher at Bloomsburg. It was largely through his individual efforts that last year's celebration of Odd Fellows was secured for Bloomsburg. He a Past Grand, is one of the older members, in point of membership, of VanCamp Lodge, No. 140, of Bloomsburg, and is prominent in Odd Fellowship in the North Branch section of the State.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the parlors of the Bush House on Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Clair Lyon Nicolls, daughter of Mrs. William Jasper Nicolls, and Mr. William J. Hearn, of New York. Rev. W. H. McKinney, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated. Mr. Ritchie Lawrie, of Pittsburgh, was the groom's attendant. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate family of the bride and a few intimate friends. Following a brief wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Hearn will reside for a time at the Bush House.

Miss Mary VanDyke departed on Tuesday for Altoona.

Dr. J. M. Brockerhoff entertained at dinner on Monday evening.

William Rees, of Patton, visited here over Easter with Mrs. Rees.

Miss Gertrude Lane, of WarriorsMark, is the guest of Miss Reba Noll.

Charles Scott has been home from Princeton for the Easter vacation.

Miss Harriet Foster and brother Samuel spent Sunday in Lock Haven.

Mrs. Harry Otto and children returned on Monday to their home in Johnstown.

Mrs. A. G. Morris, Jr., and Miss Sara Barnhart visited over Easter in Hazelton.

Charles F. Cook spent Easter in Pittsburgh with his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Curry.

Joseph Lose, of Philadelphia, spent last Friday night in Bellefonte with friends.

Mrs. W. J. Daley of Burlington, N. J., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Daley.

Bring your heavy horses to sell on Saturday, April 29th, to Geiss' Livery, Bellefonte, Pa.

George Houck, of Philipsburg, was among the Odd Fellows to parade here on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fleming, of Altoona, visited over the week-end with friends in town.

Mrs. A. O. Furst and Mrs. John Curtin visited several days recently in Watsontown and Milton.

William Wood, of Osceola Mills, was among the marchers in the Odd Fellows parade yesterday.

Miss Mary Hawes, of Harrisburg, spent several days here as the guest of Miss Henrietta Sebring.

Mrs. E. C. Merriman, of Yonkers, New York, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. John Blanchard.

Miss Nancy Hunter returned on Tuesday to Philadelphia, where she is attending Drexell Institute.

Mrs. Claire B. Williams, of Plainfield, N. J., is visiting here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs W. A. Lyon.

County Auditor Clement H. Gramley, of Rebersburg, was among the Odd Fellows to parade on Wednesday.

Edward Keichline was home from Renovo to spend Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Keichline.

Miss Annie Subers returned several days ago to Philadelphia, after visiting here for several months with her niece, Mrs. H. W. Tate.

Misses Francis and Emily Bailey and Messrs Richard Knibloe, Edward Stackpole and Mr. Fleming, of Harrisburg, were guests of Miss Sarah Hastings over Easter Sunday.

Mrs. John Wensel, of Howard, came to Bellefonte on Wednesday to see the Odd Fellows parade, and before returning will visit for a few days at the Samuel Hoy home.

Dr. W. H. Fry, of Pine Grove Mills, who has been an Odd Fellow for forty-three years, was in town yesterday and marched in the parade with as much vim and enthusiasm as many of the younger members of the order.

Thomas Jodon, of near by Bellefonte, has in the last few weeks lost four valuable western horses, each dying from what is known as western fever. He has several horses ill from the same disease. His loss to date is about $1000.

Earl C. Musser and Miss Charlotte Ulrich last week went to Hagerstown, Md., where they were married on Thursday. Mr. Musser is manager of the State-Centre Electric Co. store in Bellefonte. His bride was formerly a stenographer in the store.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Campbell and child, of Philipsburg, were among the visitors in town for the Odd Fellows celebration. Mr. Campbell, who was marshal of the first division in the parade, resided in Bellefonte when he was a boy and for some time was a student at the Bellefonte Academy. His mother, before her marriage, was a Treziyulny, a family prominently identified with the early history of the county.

Miner Killed by Train.

Andy Smith, a well known Polish miner, residing near Osceola, was run down and killed on the P. & S. tracks near the Osceola station Monday night.

S. Edwin Royer Dead.

After an illness of nearly a year, S. Edwin Royer died at his home at Altoona last Sunday evening of a complication of diseases. Mr. Royer was born at Potter's Mills, Centre County, September 6, 1860, where he grew to manhood. He was married at that place to Miss Nannie O. McCormick, on April 28, 1887. They moved to Altoona about twenty-four years ago and had resided there ever since. He was an active church worker and was for a number of years assistant superintendent of the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday school of that city and for the last sixteen years had been a class leader. He also helped to build the Lakemont Methodist Episcopal church and was a number of years superintendent of the Sunday school of that church. He is survived by his wife and three daughters: Mrs. Ross Runyen, of Altoona, and Misses Edna and Mabel B., both at home. He is also survived by one grandson and three brothers and two sisters, as follows: W. L., of North Dakota; John B., of Altoona, and Thomas F., of Potter's Mills; Mrs. Mary Krider, of Johnstown, and Mrs. H. C. Shirk, of Centre Hall. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Washington Burial Association.

"JUST DAVID"

A Pretty Story You Must Not Miss.

Probably the prettiest story written in a generation is "Just David." It is by Mrs. Eleanor H. Porter, author of "Pollyanna," "Miss Billy," "Cross Currents," etc.

The story will start serially in The Pittsburgh Dispatch, Monday May 1, 1916, and you will miss a great treat if you fail to read "Just David."

The hero is a lad of 10, who from the age of 4, has been reared in the mountains, close to nature, where, with his father, a great musician, he meets few persons and communes with the birds and bees and flowers. He knows and loves only that which is good.

The tale is a brand new one, full of romance, sentiment, happiness, music, tenderness and boyish enthusiasm.
